THE widow of former Northern Ireland motorcycling champion Darran Lindsay, 34, who died in a crash last year, has spoken for the first time about life without her beloved husband.

Mother-of-three Kerry Lindsay, 30, from Lisburn, told the News Letter yesterday that six months after his death things have never felt so hard.

Despite her grief, the brave young woman is about to participate in not one but two marathons in memory of her late husband and to raise money for charity.

In 11 days' time, and despite having a knee injury, Kerry will fly to England to take part in the London Marathon.

Then just two weeks later she will run in the Belfast City Marathon.

With the help of more than 70 friends and supporters, Kerry hopes to raise at least £10,000 for the Injured Riders' Welfare Fund and the Motorcycle Union of Ireland.

"I wanted to do the marathons in memory of Darran and I wanted to put something back into the sport that he got so much out of."
